

Becky Harris

Hi There! I currently live in a 1920s cottage in Atlanta that I'll describe as "collected." I got into design via Landscape Architecture, which I studied at the University of Virginia. I've been writing about design online for quite a few years over at Hatch: The Design Public Blog.

Inspirations: Landscape Photography

Often times on houzz I am looking for images that fit an ideabook about an interior detail, a way that makes things easier to live, or new design. Sometimes I forget to stop and ogle the roses. So many of the houzz members have posted their own beautiful photographs, or professional photographs of their own work.

When I was looking for cottage gardens a few weeks ago, I started to look for photographs that made my heart race a little. Photographing landscapes is difficult; sometimes nature does not want to help with lighting situations, and time of day is always a huge factor in the results. Here is a collection of some breathtaking shots that focus on the landscape to perk up your day.

by Clinton & Associates...

This is such a great composition, with the allium globes dazzling us in the foreground.

by Ron Herman Landscape Architect

Light and shadow considerations make for a striking photograph.

by Ashford Associates

A beautiful frog's eye view of a waterfall!

by Van De Voorde Elemental...

A sinuous carpet of sweet purple blossoms.

by Carson Poetzi, Inc.

This shot tells the story about the built work and its relationship to the desert mountain landscape.

by Carson Poetzi, Inc.

This one explores the relationship between indoors and outdoors.

by Carson Poetzi, Inc.

Spiky cacti and a cloudless blue sky frame the building.

by Jeffrey Gordon Smith...

Rectilinear deck and boxes, undulating wild plants, rectilinear agricultural fields.

by marmolradzinerprefab.com

What a peek this house allows!

by Gast Architects

Love the composition and the bright white compliments of the sun!

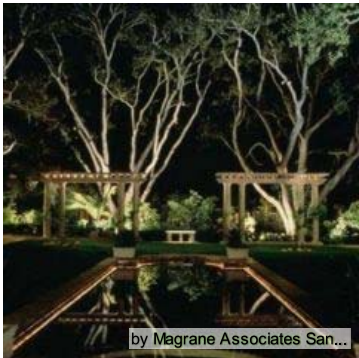

by Clinton & Associates...

I love the composition of this one as well - having students place trace paper over it and block out the main elements would be a great lesson in composition.

by Jeffrey Gordon Smith...

This is simply scrumptious.

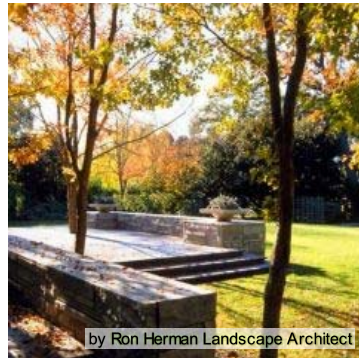

by Magrane Associates San...

A good lesson in night lighting and reflection.

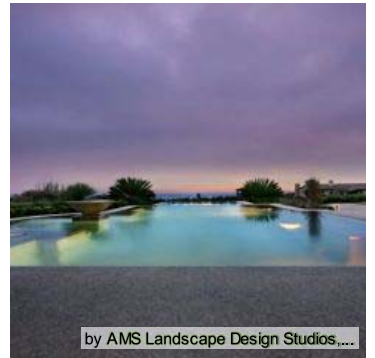

by Suzman & Cole Design...

Wild New England pink roses are given the credit they deserve.

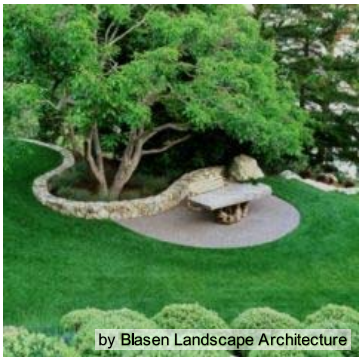

by Ron Herman Landscape Architect

Such beautiful dappled light and golden leaves!

by AMS Landscape Design Studios,...

What a sky! Note the way the shot is framed between those cypress (cedar?) trees.

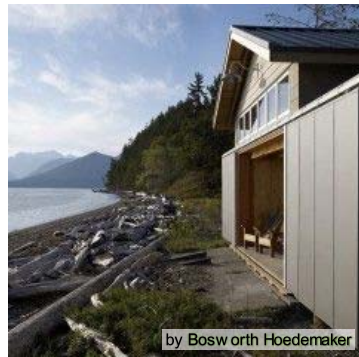

by Blasen Landscape Architecture

Simply lovely - note how the shrubs on the bottom ground the photo and give you perspective.

by Blasen Landscape Architecture

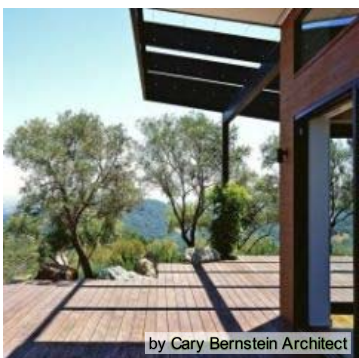

by Bosworth Hoedemaker

I just really, really "want to go to there"!

by James Hill Architect

Sublime. This one literally takes my breath away. It creates such a powerful mood.

by Cary Bernstein Architect